Rental agreement cancellation letter format

A rental agreement or lease is a contract made between a landlord that rents property to a tenant for payment. After both the landlord and tenant sign the agreement, it becomes legally binding until the end date. The tenant is commonly required to pay the security deposit (if any) and 1st month's rent prior to occupancy. Rental Application – Use to evaluate a tenant before signing a lease. Step 1 – The Tenant Views the Space Before a lease agreement is drawn up, the tenant will usually view the space and deem it acceptable to their living standards and make a verbal offer to the real estate agent, manager, or landlord. The verbal offer will usually be in reference to a monthly rental amount. Step 2 – Rental Application If the offer is conditionally accepted, the landlord will move ahead and ask for the tenant to complete a Rental Application and pay a small fee (commonly used to only cover the cost of showing the property and run a background check). Step 3 – Run a Tenant Background Check The landlord is highly recommended to run a background of the tenant's credit, background, and criminal history. Use the following resources to conduct your search: Step 4 – Verify References The landlord should contact past employers, past landlords, and any non-family references provided in the application. This will give the landlord an idea of the character of the individual(s) and if they are going to be quiet or noisy neighbors. Step 5 – Writing the Lease If the tenant(s) meet the landlord's qualifications a lease should be drafted (Instructions – How to Write). The landlord and tenant should meet to discuss the specific terms and conditions of the lease, mainly consisting of the: Fee(s) – In reference to parking, pets, trash, etc. Monthly Rent Amount ($) Move-in Date – The day the tenant will take occupancy of the space. Security Deposit – This is determined by the landlord but cannot be more than the maximum (s) State requirement. Term – Month-to-month, yearly, etc. Utilities – Electricity, water/sewer, heating, etc. Step 6 – Executing the Lease The lease is not required to be witnessed (although it is always recommended to have at least one). At the time of authorization the landlord and tenant should exchange the following: Access (keys) to the premises and all common areas (unless the occupancy does not occur until a later time) Security deposit (if required), 1st month's rent, and any pro-rated rent (if the tenant is moving-in before the lease start date). Step 7 – Taking Occupancy Move-in to the property and perform a move-in inspection and write down all damage that exists. Make sure to sign and send it to the landlord. Move-in Inspection Checklist – Use to walk around the property and list any damage to the property. This is mainly used so the tenant does not have their security deposit be wrongfully deducted for damages not conducted by the tenant. States Required: Arizona, Georgia, Hawaii, Kansas, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Montana, Nevada, New Hampshire, North Dakota, Utah, Virginia, Washington, and Wisconsin. Step 8 – End of the Lease At the end of the lease period, the landlord will decide whether or not to renew the lease. If the landlord chooses not to renew, the tenant will be required to move-out and provide their forwarding address. The landlord must send the security deposit back to the tenant, less any deductions, in accordance with security deposit returning laws. Renewal Letter – To renew a lease and make any changes to the agreement such as monthly rent. Non-Renewal Letter – To inform a tenant that the landlord does not wish to renew or extend their lease. When writing a lease agreement, it is best to have the main items, such as rent and the length of the lease, to be pre-negotiated between the parties to avoid the chance of having to re-write the document. The main lease topics are as follows (alphabetical) Alterations – Most landlords do not allow modifications to the property. And if alterations are completed by the tenant that they should be returned back to the original status at the start of the lease. For Example – If a tenant decides to paint the apartment red and the original color was white, usually the landlord will ask for the tenant to simply pay for the property to be repainted. Appliances – The landlord should describe all appliances on the premises prior to move-in such as microwaves, washer/dryer, etc. Conditions (Additional) – If there are any other items that have not been mentioned then they should be listed lastly and before the signature area. Verbal Agreements – Oral agreements are not honored in the court of law. The landlord and tenant should have all negotiated items listed in the contract. Furnishings – If the property was furnished upon the tenant moving-in, all items should be listed such as couches, beds, chairs, desks, musical instruments, and any other valuable items. This is to ensure that upon move-out that the tenant does not vacate with the property of the landlord. Waterbeds – Due to the consequences of liquid-filled furnishings over the years it is recommended that the landlord bar this type of furniture on the premises. Water damage can be very costly, and if enough is leaked, mold can grow quickly underneath carpeting in the right conditions. Governing Law – Leases are governed on a State by State basis. It is always recommended to view the laws in your municipality but most of the requirements and/or disclosures will be required on the State-level. Guests – A maximum number of people that the tenant is allowed to have on the property should be included as to not encourage constant parties or loud neighbors. Maximum Time Period – The landlord may also set a maximum time-frame for how long guests may stay on the property. House Rules – Mainly for roommate situations, if there are any house rules such as cleaning times, common areas, quiet times, or any other regulations it should be listed. Insurance (Bond) – The landlord is recommended, and required in some States, to disclose the type and amount of insurance are covered on the tenant's behalf. Late Charges – Electing to have a late fee is a way landlords try to penalize a tenant for not paying their rent in a timely manner. Some States have limits on how much a landlord may charge but it is always recommended to have a fee. Grace-Period – Some States have a "grace period" allowing the tenant a few days to pay after the rent is due. During such a period, the landlord is not allowed to charge a late fee. Maintenance – In certain situations, such as the renting of a single-family home, the landlord or tenant may be obligated to conduct timely property upkeep such as lawn care, snow plowing/shoveling, etc. Monthly Rent – Typically paid on the first (1st) of the month. Payment – Probably the most popular item stated in the lease. The rental payment due each month should be clearly stated numerically ($) and verbally in dollars much like how you write a check so that there isn't any miscommunication. Due Date – The day of the month should also be mentioned which is most commonly the first (1st). Payment Location – How the payment should be made should clearly be stated in the lease. Notices – If the tenant or landlord violates any part of the lease the parties should both have addresses (mailing and/or e-mail) of where each may be able to send a notice. Parking – If there is parking on the premises the landlord may or may not offer a spot for the tenant. Parking Fee – In most urban locations the landlord will commonly charge a parking fee. Parties – In the first (1st) paragraph the parties should be introduced. This should mention the "landlord" and "tenant" along with their legal mailing addresses. Occupants – If the tenant has children, family, or friends that will be living in the residence but not a signor on the lease they should be classified as occupants and not tenants. Pets – If animals are allowed on the premises it should be stated. In an effort to curb any wild animals the lease should mention the exact types of animals and how many are allowed on the property. Pet Fee/Deposit – Due to the extra wear-and-tear animals have on a property the landlord may elect to have a fee or deposit in the chance major damage is caused. Property Description – In the following paragraph the address of the premises should be described thoroughly including the number (#) of bedrooms, bathrooms if the property is shared, common areas, and any other details that should be written. Receipt of Agreement – The lease is not valid unless all parties have received receipt and acknowledgment of the lease. Make sure that all parties have received a copy and the form will be covered legally valid. Security Deposit – The amount that is due at the time of lease signing. This is usually equal to one (1) or two (2) month's rent and is regulated in most States to not be more than a couple months' rent. Sub-Letting – The act of subletting is the tenant acting as the landlord and re-leasing the property to another individual, also known as the "sublessee". This is not allowed in most leases, although if it is allowed, usually requires the written consent of the landlord to ensure any new sublessee is credible. Airbnb – With the popularity of Airbnb there is always the temptation by the tenant to make an additional income by renting the property on a short-term basis. This should be established in the agreement to ensure the terms are clear whether it is allowed or not. Term – This is the length of the lease, and should be described. There are two (2) types: Fixed Term – Most commonly being one (1) year but may be any time-period as agreed upon by the parties. Month-to-Month – Allows the tenant and landlord to have a freely on-going basis with either party being allowed to cancel within a certain time period (either stated in the agreement or by using the State's minimum requirement). Most month-to-month tenancies allow for either party to cancel with at least 30 to 60 days' notice. Termination – In most standard leases there is no option for the tenant to cancel the lease. In the event there is an option, usually, it will come at a fee or cost to the tenant. Utilities – The landlord may opt to pay all, some, or none of the tenant's utilities. Most will provide some, such as water/sewer, but most will elect the tenant to decide for themselves whether cable, internet, and any other they decide to have. Disclosures and Addendums Most States have required disclosures that the landlord must give to the tenant. Common Disclosures, Notices, and Addendums Late Rent Violation If there is late payment by the tenant the landlord has a couple of options. First, the landlord may accept a late fee for the delay in payment. Second, and depending on the State law, the landlord may give a Notice to Pay or Quit stating the landlord has the right to terminate the lease if the tenant does not pay by a specific date. Late Payment Laws (50 States) Other Violations If there is a violation committed by the tenant that is unrelated to late payment then the landlord may give the tenant Notice to Comply or Quit. This gives the tenant a certain amount of time to handle the issue or face eviction action. Types Sample – Residential Lease Download: Adobe PDF, MS Word (.docx), OpenDocument How to Write a Residential Lease Download: Adobe PDF, MS Word, OpenDocument Section I. The Parties (1) Date when the Agreement was written; (2) Landlord's name and mailing address; and (3) Tenant(s) name(s). Section II. Lease Type (4) Decide whether this is a fixed lease or a month-to-month lease. If a fixed lease, there will be a start and end date. If month-to-month, then a start date is required and the time period when either party may terminate the agreement (see month-to-month termination laws) Section III. Occupants (5) Enter all the names of the occupants. Occupants are individuals that will be living on the premises but are not on the lease such as children, family members, etc. Section IV. The Property (6) The mailing address of the property (include the apt # (if any)); (7) Residence type (Apartment, House, Condo, Other) (8) # of bedrooms (9) # of bathrooms Section V. Purpose (10) Enter the use(s) for the premises. For example, if it's a home in a commercial zone the tenant may be able to run a business from the premises. Section VI. Furnishings (11) If there are any furnishings, such as couches, chairs, beds, curtains, etc. Section VII. Appliances (12) If the landlord has any appliances on the premises such as a microwave, refrigerator, washer, dryer, etc. Section VIII. Rent (13) Monthly rent amount ($); (14) The day it's due each month; and (15) Payment instructions, Section IX. Non-Sufficient Funds (NSF Checks) (16) Enter whether or not there will be a fee ($ if the tenant pays with a check with non-sufficient funds (NSF). If there is a fee, enter the amount per occurrence. Section X. Late Fee (17) Whether or not there is a late fee. If there is a late fee, enter when rent is considered late and the fee for each occurrence or day rent is late. Section XI. First Month's Rent (18) If the first month's rent is due at lease signing or on the 1st day of the lease term. Section XII. Pre-Payment of Rent. (19) If the tenant is required to pre-pay rent in advance it should be selected. This is common with tenants with no or bad credit history. Section XIII. Proration Period. (20) The proration period is selected if the tenant wants to move-in before the lease start date. They will commonly have to pay the prorated amount of rent based on the number of days they moved in early. Section XIV. Security Deposit (21) If there is a security deposit, it should be selected and the amount entered. Most commonly, this is equal to one (1) month's rent but can be the maximum under State law. Section XV. Move-in Inspection (22) In some States, a move-in inspection is required. This is always recommended to protect the tenant from their security deposit being wrongfully deducted at the end of the lease for pre-existing damage to the premises. Section XVI. Parking (23) Mark whether or not the landlord will provide parking on the premises. If the landlord is to provide parking, enter if there is a fee or not for each vehicle. Section XVII. Sale of Property (24) If the landlord would like the option for the tenant to move out upon the sale of the property, it should be selected. Section XVIII. Utilities (25) Enter all utilities that the landlord will be responsible for during the term of the lease. All other utilities will be paid by the tenant. Section XIX. Early Termination (26) Gives the tenant the option to terminate the lease early. A landlord will usually allow this for a fee of one (1) month's rent. Section XX. Smoking Policy (27) Lets the landlord set the smoking policy on the premises. In California for example, this is a required to be stated in the lease. Section XXI. Pets (28) Establish a pet policy. If pets are allowed, the landlord can limit the number of pets, types, and how much they weigh. Section XXII. Waterbeds (29) It is highly recommended to detail in the lease whether or not waterbeds are allowed. Section XXIII. Notices (30) It is required in almost every State that the landlord's address is provided for official notices. (31) Although not required, it's highly recommended that the tenant's address is also entered for notices (most commonly is the address of the premises). Section XXIV. Agent/Manager (32) If the landlord has an agent or manager that maintains the property, their name, telephone, and e-mail should be entered. Section XXVII. Lead Paint (33) If the premises was built prior to 1978, according to federal law, the lead-based paint disclosure form must be attached to the lease. Section XLIX. Additional Terms and Conditions (34) If there are additional terms and conditions that need to be written they can be in this section. If none, leave blank. rental agreement cancellation letter format. how to terminate rental agreement letter. how to end a rental agreement letter. how do you write a letter to terminate a rental agreement
